EUCARPIA 19th General Congress

Topics related to genetic resources research

Gene bank collections and their contribution to new germplasm development,

Genomic exploration of crop diversity, whole genome sequencing and its potential for plant breeding,

Data storing, handling, access and retrieval in the genomics era

Molecular markers for future germplasm development,

New phenotyping and information technology systems for future plant breeding,

Novel and underutilized crops for future industrial purposes,

Breeding for future farming systems

EUCARPIA

Eucarpia membership

Corporate members: university departments, research institutes, private companies

Personal members: breeders and plant researchers from the scientific and industrial sectors, postdocs and PhD students

The membership of young scientists (PhD students and postdocs) is encouraged

Eucarpia membership policy and participation at Eucarpia events:

Application for EUCARPIA membership: one-year FREE
